I recall one particular first-class compartment that was stuffed full with gunny-sacks of shoes bought in Dar es Salaam, destined for Zambian buyers. When the UN imposed crippling sanctions on his native land, he took Hautdepage.Manyofthemwerenearretirementandsometookeearlyretirement the ensuing decades, as they have lived through post-socialist processes of liberalization, these workers have developed powerful narratives of nostalgia about Remembering the Night Train youthful experience that both match and contest those of the nation. After the railway construction was over, we thought it would have been proper for the two governments [Tanzania and Zambia] to consider what to do for us when we retire, for example we hoped that they would find settlements and farmland for us where we would live with our families.
