Sloths May Be Slow, But They're Not Stupid

Watch Alex Honnold's journey toward his rope-free climb of the world's . junkie, but climbing is actually very low adrenaline, because it is very slow. It took us one day just to hike into the mountains, then five days to climb.

However, the sound of footsteps could be heard slowly climbing the stairs toward the camera. Once the sound was at its loudest, an odd shadow passed before.

The climb is slow but somehow faster than yesterday. Jake yells, "We're climbing at a rate of five feet per minute so we should reach the bow in about two .
