The answer at one level, of course, is that it is saying what it says, and to discover what that is you must read it. He forgot how great God is. He had not left for Canaan; he had not conquered enemies; he had not committed to covenant faithfulness; he had not prayed for the righteous in Sodom and Gomorrah; he had not passed any test of faith. Shechem will become a significant site of covenant renewal for the future Israel. Call her Sarah. Most of the themes in the stories focus on missing heirs, not on the problem of gaining land. Pray for discernment regarding the future so that you can make wise plans. Chapter any summary, it is surveying the various stories and therefore – as any overture – is written at a very late time see next point. The narrator does not see the command to sacrifice Isaac as a puzzling imperilling of God's purpose to give

Abraham descendants through this son, but as God's testing of Abraham
