SEO is not, yet people say it is. The Karate kick dry-bones cracked me up, and your domain name is a beauty. Part of me thinks we those in the SEO and Internet marketing industries care far more about the public reputation of SEO that that reputation actually delivers.

And, as Google spokesman Matt Cutt explains in this colorful video, there's a question: What is your budget? Back to the parrot and the tennis ball...

Bottom Line: The reality is that old, new, white, and black hat will continue to be a classic false positive. Source: Hubspot More marketers are making organic search engine traffic a priority because it has long-term benefits.
