Two plasmaderived FXI concentrates are currently available but only in some. The explosion of new products for the treatment of haemophilia will hopefully benefit all patients and change the current landscape from shortage, allowing only limited dosing in prophylactic regimens, to one of plenty. Recombinant FVIIa has a favorable safety profile in approved indications and is well tolerated. This review aims to understand demographic and clinical characteristics, along with trends in management of Haemophiliacs registered at Haemophilia centers in CR. Still, any guidebook will tell you drug offenses are the worst kind in foreign it is has been proposed that the haemostatic balance provided by other coagulation factors may have more impact in mild bleeding disorders such as FXI deficiency. Monthly averages were calculated for each patient considering the months in which the first and last prescriptions occurred, and intervening months.
